
Where to Go? - Philadelphia, PA

Sunday, 01 June 2008

Last Updated Saturday, 18 October 2008

Philadelphia is a great and historical center of medical innovation and the region has much to offer when it comes to complementary and alternative approaches to cancer. There are about a dozen outstanding facilities to choose from, ranging from an academic medical center to a full-scale CAM hospital, and including a number of first rate individual CAM-oriented practitioners in Philadelphia as well as the surrounding suburban counties of the Delaware Valley and the Jersey Shore. This 40-page report represents the fruit of two fact-finding trips that Ralph Moss took in April and May, 2008. It is an objective, yet intimate, look at the practices of various doctors who are trying to apply CAM approaches to the treatment of cancer. For more information or to order this report, please click here.